

Christine Looser
Teaching Evaluations
Mind Reading Seminar

What were the strengths of this course?

Christine always checks in to make sure we know about the material start to finish... Final paper was interesting and people were ACTUALLY interested in writing them.

Christine Christine Christine. She is really great a 1. displaying her passion and knowledge of the field and course topics and 2. getting EVERYONE engaged and having a great time and highly HIGHLY involved throughout the whole class time.

The readings were fascinating, and the over arching themes that connected the readings made the course material even more memorable. Also, Christine is great at facilitating discussion.

She is one of the best professors I've had at Harvard. I'm sure practically everyone in the class agrees...this was the one class that I always came prepared, knew that my classmates would be prepared, and knew I could walk away from an engaging discussion.

Christine was a great seminar leader– she struck a great balance between keeping the class on track and allowing the class to discuss freely. Part of this was the fact that she made the class feel very comfortable speaking their minds instead of creating a very awkward professor-student dynamic.

Amazing! Great at facilitating the discussion and not afraid to allow us to talk about tangents, all while keeping a focus on the topic. Definitely one of (if not the) best professor in the department!

What aspect of the class was most valuable?

Gaining the ability to be more critical of papers– finding weak points, suggesting improvements, and generally being more aware of how to build a good study.

The group discussions and involvement. I have never been in a course with so much great energy.

The opportunity to practice discussing academic subjects under the supervision of an expert; I learned a lot about how to participate in academic discussions through this class.

The idea that people could CHALLENGE each other's ideas in the classroom setting, and that built a constructive environment for discussion and learning.
