Gov 10: Foundations of Political Theory
Danielle Allen
Syllabus

Course overview
This course investigates the central problems of political theory that concern the justification and operation of democratic-republican forms of government. What are the proper purposes of political institutions? What political institutions can best achieve those ends and bring to life values of liberty, equality, sound judgment, and participation? What are the moral responsibilities of citizens—whose representatives exercise political power in their name? Is democracy a human right? We will take up these questions by reading the Federalist Papers, supplemented by canonical and contemporary works in political theory. While the focus on the Federalist Papers means that, this semester, the course will explicitly focus on the U.S. case study, the concepts at issue have origins in a variety of historical contexts and places and are pertinent to ongoing political debates around the globe. A key objective of the class will be to develop skills at attending simultaneously to the contextual particularities of the political society under consideration and to the conceptual building blocks of political thinking.

Prerequisites
There are no official prerequisites for this course.

Requirements and assignments
Attendance and Active Participation in discussion and engagement in lectures, section, and peer exchange process (20%).

Reading Responses (10%): For each weekly section meeting, students will be required to prepare two or three short written questions that they think merit discussion, with a brief statement of why they think the questions important, and to submit those questions by email to the Teaching Fellow responsible for their section not later than 6 p.m. on the day before the section meeting and to hulaias2013@gmail.com. Each student may opt not to submit written questions for any three weeks of his or her choosing.

First Assignment (10%): A five-page analytical paper is due on February 21. Students will exchange the first submitted draft with a peer, who will compose a two-page response, due on February 25. The revised paper is due on February 28.

Second Assignment (20%): A seven-page analytical paper is on April 11. Students will exchange the draft with a peer, who will compose a two-page response, due on April 13. The revised paper is due in-class on April 18.
We will make available detailed handouts on paper topics, guidelines on writing analytical papers, and the mechanics of the paper exchange.

Mid-Term Examination (15%): This take-home examination (5 page) integrates the themes and readings of the course, drawing on arguments/activities in lecture. Open books and notes. Due in-class on March 7.

Final Examination (25%): This take-home examination (6-8 page) integrates the themes and readings of the course, drawing heavily on arguments/activities in lecture. Open books and notes. Due on Monday May 7.

The following policies apply to written assignments: (1) All assignments are to be submitted to your Teaching Fellow by 5p, e.g., a paper submitted at 5:10p is one day late; (2) Late papers will be penalized at the rate of 1/3 of a letter grade for every 24 hours (A- to B+); however, late papers turned in within the first 24 hours after the deadline will be penalized only 1/6 a grade (A- to A-/B+); (3) This grade penalty will only be waived in the case of documented medical emergencies; (4) Plagiarism, the presentation of another person’s work as one’s own, will be reported to the Harvard administration; (5) All assignments must be completed in order to pass the course.

Academic Integrity

Discussion and the exchange of ideas are essential to the study of political theory, and I of course encourage you to talk with each other about the readings and the class. Nevertheless you must always bear in mind that the work on your essays must be entirely your own. If books, articles, websites, or discussions have helped you with your paper, cite them in proper footnote and bibliography form. Plagiarism and other forms of academic dishonesty are serious offenses, and will be treated as such.

Accommodations for students with disabilities

Students needing academic adjustments or accommodations because of a documented disability must present their Faculty Letter from the Accessible Education Office (AEO) and speak with me by the end of the second full week of the term, February 2. Failure to do so may result in our inability to respond in a timely manner.
