Course description.

This course is an introduction to American democracy and its political institutions. It examines the constitutional foundation of the system and its development over time. It studies how the institutions of the federal government — the Congress, the presidency, and the courts — operate and how they interact with one another. It analyzes the increasingly important role of campaigns and electoral pressures in contemporary American governance and examines how political parties, interest groups, activists, and the media influence elections and policy-making. By applying key ideas from political science, students learn to think analytically about American politics and become more discriminating consumers of political news and information.

Course meetings.

The course meets twice per week. Attendance at all class meetings is a natural expectation of the course and students are responsible for all assigned readings. All readings should be completed prior to that course meetings. Course meetings will be a combination of lecture, discussion, and small group activities, and students are expected to be active participants in each. All readings not contained in the textbook can be obtained via Canvas unless noted otherwise.

Course requirements.

Your evaluation for the course will be based on the following components:

- Short response essays 25%

  In weeks 2, 3, and 4, students should submit a short response to articles from major news sources on some aspect of contemporary American politics. In 500 to 1,000 words, students should use the material from the course to engage the claims made in the articles. Based on our class discussions and readings, do you believe the author right or wrong? What has the author missed, overlooked, or misunderstood? What have the authors of our readings missed, overlooked, or misunderstood? The goal for these assignments is to use and apply the material from the course to understood real-world politics. These assignments should be posted to the Discussions section of Canvas by 5PM on Friday, June 30; Friday, July 7; and Friday, July 14.

Research paper

It is likely our course will raise more questions for you than it will answer – and this is a good thing! Using the tools of social science inquiry, students should identify a testable research question and outline a potential research project. In 5 to 8 pages (double-spaced), students should present a well-defined research question; describe why the question is important; propose and defend a potential answer to the question based on your understanding of American government; and outline your ideas about how you could test your hypothesis. Students are encouraged to consult closely with the TF and the instructor in working on this project. Papers should be submitted by email to the instructor and the TF by 5PM on Friday, July 28.

Final exam

Wednesday, August 2, 8:30AM.

Participation

20%

Late assignments.

Late assignments are extremely discouraged and will be heavily penalized without a note from a doctor or resident dean. Written assignments will be penalized two-thirds of a letter grade (e.g., from B+ to B-) for every day late. Students will be unable to make up the final exam without documentation from a doctor or university official.

Academic integrity.

You are responsible for understanding Harvard Summer School policies on academic integrity (http://www.summer.harvard.edu/policies/student-responsibilities) and how to use sources responsibly. Not knowing the rules, misunderstanding the rules, running out of time, submitting the wrong draft, or being overwhelmed with multiple demands are not acceptable excuses. To support your learning about academic citation rules, please visit the Resources to Support Academic Integrity (http://www.summer.harvard.edu/resources-policies/resources-support-academic-integrity) where you will find links to the Harvard Guide to Using Sources and two free online 15-minute tutorials to test your knowledge of academic citation policy. The tutorials are anonymous open-learning tools.
Accessibility.

The Summer School is committed to providing an accessible academic community. The Accessibility Office offers a variety of accommodations and services to students with documented disabilities. Please visit http://www.summer.harvard.edu/resources-policies/accessibility-services for more information. Students needing academic adjustments or accommodations because of a documented disability must present their Faculty Letter from the Accessibility Office in the Division of Continuing Education and speak with the professor by the end of the first week of the term.
