Course

Evaluate the course overall.: 5 (excellent)

This is an excellent, interesting, and well-taught class. The workload is fair, the readings are selected well and give a good survey of the field, discussion is good, and the TF (Jenn Larson) is excellent. Everything is presented in a way that is easy to comprehend. I pretty much never actually enjoy classes but I was very glad to have taken this one.

Jenn is an amazing TF, but be prepared for some pretty technical readings.

Especially for students who are interested in exploring a relatively new field and seeing how the same tools can be applied in totally new and different ways to augment existing research.

Jenn is so great. She's super smart and really nice. She was definitely the main reason I learned so much from the class. I especially liked how she facilitated discussion and made a collaborative learning environment.

Great teaching fellow. Very good at controlling discussion in section and making sure it's not always the same people who contribute/answer questions. Very outgoing and understanding. Very good at presenting stuff on the blackboard. Undergrads are lucky to have as great a TF as you, and I hope you continue to teach while and after you complete your PhD!

Jenn is a successful discussion facilitator with a healthy sense of humor and ability to relate to students. She usually answers questions well when students have trouble understanding certain networks concepts. She seems to respect students and our work.
